Goddamn
it, you...

Anyway, just score.

Yes, I'll
debrief using the compiled footage from various CCTVs
and black boxes from the area.

At 10:30 am, 0046hrs,
the Presidential Jet arrived in Hanoi
International Airport.

At 10:50 am, after
checking the schedule,
the President leaves the airport. At 11:00 am, the President decides to hold a parade through the streets of Hanoi, which wasn't part of the schedule.

Oh, you've decided to do it in the end?

You know he is a stubborn man. Anyway,
between 10:30 and 10:40, 3 to 5 armed suspects in BKP suits are spotted within the crowd.

The "33rd and 33rd
quickly followed up with protocols and secured the perimeter
and evacuated the president into the armored limousine.

*1st - Capital Defense Command, 32nd Military Police, Presidential Security Team, 32nd National Police Presidential Security Team

If these were just lightly-armed suspects, they should have been easily neutralized...

At 12:03, as soon as the security detail secured the area, a roadside bomb exploded in front of the parade route.

Wait, but the intel clearly said there were no ground disturbances along the parade route!

We can discuss who's responsible for that later. Right now, the bigger issue is that chemical agents were infused with the explosives.

IN THE MIDDLE OF A CITY STREET? ARE THESE FUCKERS CRAZY?

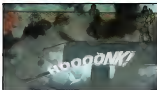

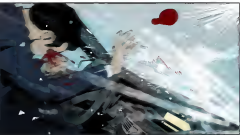

They are. We're not sure what they used but what we do know is that they have caustic effects on physical contact as well as inhalation.

Approximately within 7 minutes after the explosion,
the entire security detail excluding those onboard the presidential vehicle were either killed or incapacitated.

After the suspects revealed themselves from the smoke, they engaged in a direct attack on the vehicle

Yes,
and the driver was instantly

Hmm...
Go on.

Quick
reflexes

Yes, HBO protection was basic. Also, we noticed that the effect of the chemical agents decrease greatly if the skin and respiratory system are not exposed to the agent simultaneously.

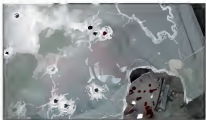

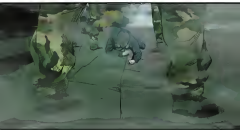

What the hell
is that van?

It looks like it's been acquired locally. It was spotted outside the security lines and appeared again after the explosion.

And that's all we have.

These records were sent from a reconnaissance drone between 12:38 and 12:58.

Current time 13:21, a defense order has been issued to all citizens within 10 kilometers of the area. The Myanmar Hasmac unit has been dispatched to the location but the contamination has only gone down by 2%.

All military units within the 2km radius of the blast suffered over 90% casualties. Basically, all the units within the area have been annihilated.

The 33rd and 22nd suffered 100% casualties due to the chemical agents. Not only this, it is difficult to expect quick help from any reserve personnel and realistically it is unlikely that the Myanmar armed forces would set up the barricades in time. We need to go in.

I didn't expect any good news but this is too much.

This is the last known footage of the president we have. Looking at the political status of Myanmar and South Korea, it is possible that this was carried out by "jemaah islamiah or some other Islamist extremist group.

*Southeast Islamic militant terrorist organization

Due to persecutions of Muslims

However, by looking at their efficiency, skills and equipment, it is highly unlikely that this was carried out by a simple extremist organization

Not an extremist organization...?

So it's the North

Ah fuck
it, what's the current situation?

I'll begin

Yongon City is currently 33 degrees Celsius with an optimal atmosphere. We are using the reconnaissance drone the JSOC received last month to track the suspects' vehicles.

*JSOC, Joint Special Operations Command, fictional military unit in South Korea

The suspects are moving at high-speed towards the South-West in four separate vehicles.

According to the x-ray footage we are receiving, the President is onboard the second vehicle, the same van that rammed the presidential vehicle. There are two suspects in each vehicle, all well equipped with automatic rifles and gas masks.

According to the tracker placed in the president's heart, if we miss them now he might die of a heart attack. We have to take them now or never.

Bring me some good news for once.

Hmmm... Anyways, looking at their current route, I think we will be able to intercept them at this intersection.

Alright
men, listen
up.

I assume you all heard the details so I'll get straight to the plan.

Our top priority is to rescue the president from the enemy at all costs.

We have confirmed that 8 lightly-armed suspects are onboard 4 non-armored civilian vehicles escaping through the city roads in high-speed. The suspects are divided in the vehicles by twos.

Although we are outnumbered, we have an armored vehicle mounted with a K-8 heavy machinegun. With these, we have a clear advantage in firepower.

I'll say
this again
but one objective
takes priority over every thing else.

The security of the president in vehicle number 2.
As long as you don't fuck up any civilians,
I don't care whoever you kill!

Here's the plan. As soon as we come in contact with the suspects
we'll ram vehicle
number 1 with the MRAP.

As vehicle 2 and 3 are moving at high-speed, all they can do is either crash into us or spin off the road.

The K-6 gunner will then switch targets and open fire on vehicle 4 and disable it. This will prevent the enemy from providing covering fire from the rear.

As soon as vehicle 1 is down, fire teams 1 and 2 will disembark through the rear door under the cover of the K-6 gunner. Fire team 1 will then move 3 o'clock towards the firing zone, while fire team 2 along with the K-6 gunner provides covering fire. Fire team 2 will then move 9 o'clock from the MRAP and proceed to flank the enemy from the right.

Once the area is clear, fire teams 1 and 2 will cover each other as they advance. Fire team 1 will secure vehicle number 2 and the president while covering fire team 2, which will secure vehicle number 3 and eliminate any remaining suspects.

Most of the civilians are already evacuated from the area so collateral damage won't be a big issue in this operation. The vehicles and belongings they left behind will also act as important strategic cover for us as well. With that being said, we'll need to make sure we take full advantage of the heavy machinegun we have in our possession, something the enemies don't have.
